

Purloined Letter.

The purloined letter is a story of Edgar Allan Poe reflects a brilliant mind in the form of detective story pattern. It reminds one of the stories of Sherlock Holmes.

The story starts with the city of Paris where C. Auguste Dupin succeeds in restoring the stolen letter to its owner. The Purloined letter from the royal apartment is in the possession of Dupin. This letter is in fact a document. This letter gives certain power to the holder. It is the diplomacy of can't. When Dupin is informed about it, it is beyond his understanding.

One who steals it is a great robber. He is called Grand D who dares all things. The method of theft is not less ingenious than bold. The document in question - a letter to be frank has been received by the personage robbed while alone in the royal boudoir in personage robbed is more thoroughly convinced everyday of the necessity of reclaiming the letter.

The letter which is preserved in the hand of Dupin will be in the possession of the minister which bestows the power. Anyway the letter is searched in the hotel of minister and other places but is not recovered. The conversation between D and G is continue D blames G and G blames D. They consider all the poets are fools and the fools are poet. They believe in logic of mathematics. The mathematics is the science of form and quantity. Mathematical reasoning is only logic applied to observation upon form and quantity. They presented the broken appearance. The letter which is lost is not regained. It is searched in the snuff box. It is open but is not found.

Dupin is an unprincipled man of genius and monstrem horrendum. As a whole this story appears simple but is full of adventure. It shows Poe's skill in story writing and moving logical to achieve the goal.
